THE CHALLENGE: ATTRACTING AND RETAINING MORE AND BETTER TALENT

THE CURRENT PROBLEM:

While the City of Dallas has made progress in recruiting, employing and retaining a diverse, talented and engaged workforce, there is reason for concern on the future pipeline of prospective City workers. The challenge extends beyond critical and hard-to-fill positions with the younger generations not feeling compelled to seek a public service career due to misperceptions around working environment, growth opportunities, compensation and benefits.

THE PROPOSED SOLUTION:

As one of the largest public sector employers in Texas, the City of Dallas offers unmatched benefits and career opportunities. We must generate awareness of benefits, opportunities and advantages of a public service career in order to change misperceptions by highlighting civil service and city employees' substantial energy, power and impact.

THE EXPECTED OUTCOME:

Build a robust and sustainable talent attraction pipeline and, ultimately, make the civil and public service a sought-after career and the City of Dallas the premier public sector employer in Texas.

ROI + ROE: INVESTING IN TALENT ATTRACTION AND RETENTION HAS FINANCIAL AND NON-FINANCIAL BENEFITS

ROI (Financial Return On Investment):

Cost Savings

Reduced employee turnover can save costs associated with recruitment, onboarding, and training.

Increased Productivity

Skilled and experienced employee output and overall productivity increase, and higher productivity can lead to increased cost savings.

Alleviate Stressed Resources

Reducing time-to-fill vacant jobs alleviates stress on current employees and can help avoid incremental costs of overtime or urgent work requirements.

ROE (Non-Financial Return On Engagement):

Robust Talent Pool

Having a larger pool of applicants and attracting high-quality candidates reduces time-to fill job vacancies and increases fit with organizational requirements and diversity of labor force.

Employee Engagement and Retention

Increased job satisfaction, commitment and motivation lead to improvements in talent retention rates and reduces churn.

City of Dallas Brand

A fully-staffed and engaged work force can enhance the City of Dallas employer brand image, as well as reputation, perception and positive word-of-mouth.

IMPLEMENTATION STRATEGY: COMMUNICATION PILLARS

CONSISTENT BRAND VOICE

Ensure consistency in tone and style through all written, verbal or in-person communication initiatives for all brand elements, from mission and values, to messaging pillars and calls to action.

VOICE OF THE EMPLOYEE

Engage and encourage current team members and alumni to participate in making our employer brand visible, well-known, well-respected and sought-after.

TRAINED POINTS OF CONTACT

Managers and supervisors should be trained to understand our employer brand and how to reinforce and communicate it with current team members and prospective employees on a continual basis.

MULTI-CHANNEL AND MULTI-MEDIA

Use a variety of graphic, audio, video and in-person communication channels including website content, newsletters, testimonial videos, print materials, paid advertising, events, community outreach and internal training and onboarding materials.

CITY OF DALLAS EMPLOYER BRAND ELEMENTS

IMPLEMENTATION STRATEGY (WHO, WHEN, WHERE)

BRAND ARCHITECTURE (WHAT, WHY)

YOUNGER GENERATIONS ARE DRIVEN BY INSTANT GRATIFICATION

The idea that younger generations are driven by instant gratification may influence their expectations and behavior when it comes to the job application process. Younger job seekers may be more likely to expect a fast response or to want to know where their application stands in the process.

58% of millennials expect to hear back from a potential employer within a week of submitting their application, compared to just 39% of baby boomers. This suggests that younger generations may be more likely to become impatient if they do not receive a quick response to their job application. [Source: Indeed]

Additionally, younger job seekers may be more likely to use technology to track the status of their job application. A survey conducted by the talent management software company iCIMS found that 71% of millennials and 60% of Gen Z (born between 1997 and 2012) would be likely to use an app to track the status of their job application, compared to just 24% of baby boomers. [Source: iCIMS]

ASSESSING ADVANTAGES VS. RISKS

Advantages of Making the Employee the Hero:

Sense of Pride: Focusing on the employee as the hero makes the campaign more employee-centered. This approach can help create a sense of pride and loyalty among current employees. “This can happen because of me”.

Emotional Appeal: By showcasing employees' achievements and success stories, the campaign can create an emotional connection with prospective employees, making the job and the employer more desirable.

Talent Attraction: This approach can help attract talent that resonates with the City's culture and values, leading to more engaged and productive employees.

Risks of Making the Employee the Hero:

Risk of Over-Promising: Highlighting employees' success stories can set high expectations among prospective employees. If the actual work experience does not live up to those expectations, it can lead to disappointment and frustration.

Limited Perspective: Focusing solely on the employee as the hero may not give a complete picture of the City's values, mission, and overall work culture.

Advantages of Making the Employer the Hero:

Strong Brand Identity: Highlighting the employer as the hero can help create a strong brand identity and showcase the City's values, mission, and work culture.

Risk Mitigation: This approach can mitigate the risk of over-promising by presenting a more balanced and accurate picture of the employer.

Community Building: By showcasing the company as the hero, the campaign can also help build a sense of community among employees and prospective employees.

Risks of Making the Employer the Hero:

Lack of Emotional Appeal: This approach may lack the emotional appeal that showcasing employees' success stories can create.

Unintentional Hierarchy: Focusing on the City of Dallas can make the campaign too employer-centered, potentially creating a sense of hierarchy between the employer and employees.

Creativity

MAKES A BRAND RELEVANT.

Purpose

MAKES A BRAND NECESSARY.
