BACKGROUND

Commercial paper provides interim financing for Dallas Water Utilities (DWU) capital projects. The use of commercial paper permits more cost-efficient use of capital as short-term debt is issued to closely match the amount and timing of the award of capital project contracts. Commercial paper notes are normally sold at rates of interest that are lower than rates available at the same time on long-term debt. Commercial paper issuance is supported by lines of credit from highly rated banks. These lines of credit assure investors that the notes will be paid in the unlikely event that a note cannot be sold to another investor at maturity. Outstanding commercial paper is periodically reduced by refinancing it with long-term debt.

In 1987, City Council authorized an ordinance establishing a commercial paper program as interim financing for DWU capital improvements for a period of 10 years, ending in September 1997, with a maximum issuance amount of $100 million. Since 1987, DWU's initial commercial paper program has been reauthorized several times and increased in total size to $600 million. The existing $600 million program was authorized in June 2014 to be issued as Series D and Series E notes. Currently, the City is seeking to replace the expiring program and authorize a new DWU commercial paper program, as Series F and Series G, respectively.

Current service providers for the Series D program are U.S. Bank N.A. as Issuing and Paying Agent, Bank of America Merrill Lynch as commercial paper dealer, State Street Bank and Trust as Liquidity Facility provider for subseries D-1, and Bank of America, N.A. as Liquidity Facility provider for subseries D-2.

In February 2021, the Office of Procurement Services issued a Request for Competitive Sealed Proposals for Commercial Paper Dealer and Liquidity Provider for the City of Dallas Waterworks and Sewer System to establish Series F ($300 million) and Series G ($300 million). Based on the size of the programs and on recommendation of financial advisors, two City selected two service providers for Commercial Paper Dealer and three service providers for Liquidity Provider.

A six-member evaluation committee was selected from the following departments:

- City Controller's Office (1)
- Dallas Water Utilities (1)
- Department of Aviation (1)
- Office of Bond and Construction Management (1)
- Financial Advisors (2)

For the Series F program, one successful proposer was selected as Dealer by the committee on the basis of demonstrated competence and qualifications under the following criteria:

- Qualifications/experience of the firm (55%)
- Pricing (40%)
- Local Preference Program (5%)

For the Series F program, two successful proposers were selected as Liquidity Provider, to be established as subseries F-1 and Subseries F-2, by the committee on the basis of demonstrated competence and qualifications under the following criteria:

- Qualifications/experience of the firm (45%)
- Bank Ratings (20%)
- Pricing (30%)
- Local Preference Program (5%)

An informal bid was issued for Commercial Paper Issuing and Paying Agent, consisting of four bank solicitations with one issuing and paying agent response received by U.S. Bank, N.A.
