BACKGROUND

Since February 2021, the Dallas Police Department (DPD) has been engaged in a city-wide crime reduction effort to combat violent crime. This effort will allow DPD to continue to develop and implement the Violent Crime Reduction Plan. DPD will partner with the University of Texas at San Antonio (UTSA) criminologists to provide research assistance and advice on evidence-based strategies to address violence. Additionally, UTSA will assist DPD with analyzing data related to the examination of geographic crime patterns and trends.

UTSA researchers will provide support to DPD in the following areas:

- Preparation and review of reports, presentations, and/or data visualization
- Participate in Public Safety Committee and Council meetings
- Provide guidance to DPD on modifications to plans

DPD's continued collaboration with UTSA will allow for strategic initiatives that will assist with identifying, analyzing, and reducing violent crimes.
